

Logical analysis of price increases in the solar container sector

Overview

Here, we draw on various sources to provide an exhaustive analysis on the container shipping sector, its impact on solar projects, what prices are expected to do moving forwards and the key factors that could cast the sector into further uncertainty. Cast your mind. Ocean freight rates are rising in Q2 2025, at an alarming rate—again. Shipping a container from Shanghai to Rotterdam now costs $6,000+, up from just $1,800. According to Freightos, this spike isn't just a seasonal fluctuation—it reflects deep, structural disruptions across the maritime logistics. Since the highs of 2020, prices have not come down in a material sense and still represent a massive extra cost for importers of solar products in the US and Europe, helping to push up the price of modules and in turn raise project capex costs. While significant supply additions are upcoming, it is. ■ Transport cost shares currently high, due to disruptions in global logistics. ■ Module price does not impact absolute transport costs (€/module) but high impact on transport cost share → lower module prices increase transport cost share ■ Transport costs can account for up to 43% of final module. The global solar container market is expected to grow from USD 0.29 billion in 2025 to USD 0.83 billion by 2030, at a CAGR of 23.8% during the forecast period.
