Overview

This guide walks through every major energy tax credit available in 2025, including home improvement incentives, solar and renewable energy credits, electric vehicle tax credits, and the greatly overlooked EV charging equipment credit. Installing an electric vehicle charger in your home can make charging an electric vehicle simpler, faster, and more convenient, while potentially increasing your home's property value. This tax credit reduces the costs associated with such charging equipment and installation. If you install.

Federal tax credits were available to consumers, fleets, businesses, and tax-exempt entities that acquired new, used, and commercial clean vehicles before September 30, 2025—including all-electric vehicles (EVs), plug-in hybrid EVs, fuel cell EVs, and alternative fuel refueling infrastructure. The Federal tax credits for energy-efficient home improvements and clean vehicles won't be available in 2026. Here's how you can still claim the credits before they expire. For some people, the desire to reduce their carbon footprint is reason enough to purchase an electric vehicle or make. The Residential Clean Energy Credit (25D) provides a 30% credit for solar, geothermal, storage, and other renewable systems, allows carryforward, and includes special rules for new construction completed and occupied by December 31, 2025.
